

MANNA FOR CHILDREN
is Read and Color Books to bring Bible stories to poor children who cannot afford expensive story and activity books.

"Give me color book!" shouted the small boy in his native Khmer language.

He was just one of the hundreds of kids who live at the city dump in Phnom Penh, Cambodia. He wanted a Read-and-Color book like all the other children had.

Charia Our and her husband Thearith had prepared 400+ Christmas bags for the people who live at the city dump. And in each bag they put bread, soap crayons and a Read-and-Color book. Charia had translated the book and printed 500 copies at her own expense.

Since then, this young couple has been able to rent a building near the dump and turn it into a community center. The children come there for a snack and to learn about Jesus.

SMALL, LOW-COST BOOK

The small, low-cost coloring books we call "Manna for Children" are based on Bible stories. They are useful for teaching Bible truth, literacy-reading and to develop motor skills in these disadvantaged children in orphanages, hospitals, refugee camps where children have nothing.

The books are effective in class. The teacher can explain the story before the children begin to color the pictures. In Vacation Bible School, two pages can be colored each day.

To test comprehension, the child can be asked to explain the story or asked what a certain picture means.

Coloring the pictures helps impress the story on their memory so they cannot forget it.

HOW TO USE THE BOOKS

A pan of crayons can be placed in the center of a circle of children. Each child can take a crayon from the pan, use it and then put it back. The teacher puts the crayons away at the end of the period.

The books can be useful to summer teams going overseas. We are looking for North American and European churches which will sponsor the translation and printing of a book. With packs of crayons, these slim, economic books can be taken along by team members.

Whether you are home-schooling, work with kids' clubs in your church, or going on a short term missions trip to another country, it is very easy to download the PDF files for these books from the MannaPublications.org website and to print and make photocopies to distribute as needed.

Do you have some unused crayons or pencil crayons in your house that you could donate?

Manna Publications was formed to help the Christians in poor countries print and distribute affordable Bible commentaries. Manna for Children is a similar effort to provide an attractive, activity book at low cost for the many needy children who rarely have a good book of their own. Each book is also to share the gospel in a clear way.

When our supporters have been generous, Manna Publications will help toward printing costs for these Read-and-Color books.

Please check with us if you would like it in a special translation, or if you would be willing to translate for us into a language you know.

The best way to obtain these books is by downloading from our website;
